Dumpsters Dangerous

Children have a tendency to play in areas where they are not under the watchful eye of their parents. They like to find new and exciting places other than playgrounds or such areas set aside for them. One place in particular that seems to have become a favorite place for children to play is on and around the many Dumpster Dumpsters found on the naval station.

To a child a Dumpster is a place to hide or a mountain to climb with his friends. But when an accident occurs to a child playing around a Dumpster, it is not the child's fault, but the parents. It is very easy for a child to fall off a Dumpster when playing on it or to get hurt by being in the way of the backing truck that hauls the Dumpster away for emptying. Yet the parents failure to warn their children about such dangers leaves the door open for a tragic accident. When playing inside a Dumpster, it is not hard for a child to cut himself on broken glass or to pick up any number of germs that breed in garbage.

Many parents give their children the chore of emptying garbage. Sometimes the child is too small to do the job and will either miss getting the rubbish into the Dumpster, scattering garbage on the lawn or area, or he will get hurt by the heavy door of the Dumpster swinging back on him. As of yet there have been no serious accidents reported of children playing around a Dumpster, but the possibility of one occurring and the resulting price to be paid in serious injury or death are stakes too high for parents to gamble with.

YOU ARE THE BOSS!

There is an old saying, "To be awake and alert is to be alive."

Today, the average person takes a big risk not only in crossing streets, in the auto, home, etc., but also in his personal life. The world in which he lives is moving, and moving fast.

Where do you fit into the picture? Are you awake and alert to all that's going on around you? Are you on your toes?

For example are your personal affairs tidy? If you should have an accident tomorrow and land in a hospital (and who can assure you that you won't?) do your dependents know where your records are located? Are they up to date and the way YOU want them?

In this fast moving world you must take into account every facet of living. And that means right down to the smallest detail.

The way you handle yourself and your personal affairs reflects upon you as an individual. If your personal affairs are neat and tidy, as they should be, good. You're awake and living.

But just for safety's sake, check with the personnel people who handle your records. They, too, are concerned with your personal affairs. But only YOU can straighten them out. (AFNB)

Requiem Mass Said For Capt. J. R. Jansen

Requiem Mass was held for Capt. John R. Jansen, 27, at the Naval Station Chapel last Saturday with Father John W. Wishard, Catholic chaplain, officiating.

The young Air Force officer lost his life in the crash of his F-102 last Thursday, Sept. 15, while on a routine training flight. He was a member of the 57th Fighter Interceptor Squadron based here at Keflavik International Airport.

Assisting Father Wishard at the Mass were officers and men of the 57th FIS.

In his funeral eulogy, Father Wishard spoke of the subject of death and our commitment to it as a necessary boundary between life and the ultimate destiny of eternal life. The chaplain concluded his eulogy by saying, "our greatest tribute to Captain Jansen is not words of praise or useless tears, but to look upon him as a man who died in glory, and to emulate those virtues he lived so well."

The Mass was concluded by the playing of Taps by Marine Corporal John Puller.

Attending the Requiem Mass were RAdm and Mrs. Ralph Weymouth, Capt. and Mrs. Emile
